Adam Rhys-Davies

Call: 1998

Civil Fraud

Adam Rhys-Davies practises nationwide and is instructed by most of the country's leading firms specialising in civil insurance fraud, and is requested by many of the UK's insurance companies.

He has extensive experience in all areas of civil fraud, including employer's liability, occupier's liability and public liability, but particularly in relation to road traffic accidents. On a weekly basis, Adam deals with cases involving fabricated, staged and induced ('slam-on') accidents, bogus passengers and phantom witnesses, low-velocity-impact (LVI) claims and exaggerated personal-injury and damage claims. He has expertise in dealing with individual and opportunistic frauds, as well organised fraud rings. Adam also has wide experience with credit-hire claims, including very high-value cases (in excess of £250,000).

Adam Rhys-Davies practises nationwide and is instructed by most of the country's leading firms

He advises at the pre-proceedings stage and throughout the course of litigated cases, and conducts conferences with lay clients and witnesses (including expert engineering and medical) to test the strength of their evidence. Adam uses his extensive forensic skills when preparing and drafting the detailed defences essential in civil-fraud cases, as well as appropriate Part 18 requests and applications for specific disclosure, including non-party disclosure. He deals with all interlocutory applications which might arise in civil fraud cases and has successfully defended many cases at trial both on the fast-track and multi-track.

Adam also presents seminars on all areas of law relating to civil insurance fraud.

Personal Injury

Adam Rhys-Davies has practised in personal injury (PI) work since pupillage, and receives instructions in fast-track and multi-track claims from both claimants and defendants, with the majority of his workload now on the multi-track (especially complex issues and medical causation). A significant proportion of his practice is repeat instructions from solicitors throughout the UK.

He covers the full spectrum of personal injury work, including employer's liability, industrial disease (particularly noise-induced hearing loss, asbestosis and VWF/HAVS), road traffic accidents, public liability and fatal accidents.

Education:
