to challenge attribution and other evidence relating to the seizure and alleged use of electronic devices.

Peter has defended in lengthy complex cases involving spousal and other familial homicide and in many “one punch manslaughter” cases.

In November 2016 Peter was leading counsel for the Crown in his fifth multi-defendant joint enterprise murder by shooting. He has prosecuted and defended in numerous joint enterprise knife-crime homicides. Additionally, in February 2017 Peter was leading Counsel for the Prosecution in a multi defendant motor – manslaughter “cash for crash” case.

In March 2017, Peter defended in a case involving the murder and serious serial physical abuse of a baby aged four and a half months. This involved the assimilation of, and challenge to, highly complex pathological, neuropathological and histo-pathological evidence. In April 2017, Peter defended in a murder case involving loss of self-control involving complex psychiatric issues.

In addition to the forgoing, he is instructed regularly by the defence in a range of cases on a privately paid basis. He has successfully defended clients from the professions.

Counter-terrorism

Peter has recently returned from a month in Nigeria, having been invited by the UK Foreign & Commonwealth Office to advise Nigeria’s elite advocates on the investigation and presentation of counter-terrorism cases. Peter continues this specialist training for elite Prosecutors and Judges in Tanzania and Somaliland.
